

A parent's educational attainment is one of the best predictors of a child's academic success.

That's why we work with each mother to set educational goals and provide her with over 700 hours of intensive, high-quality instruction each year.

In addition, we teach mothers how to foster their child's growth and development and how to effectively manage the many stresses in their lives.

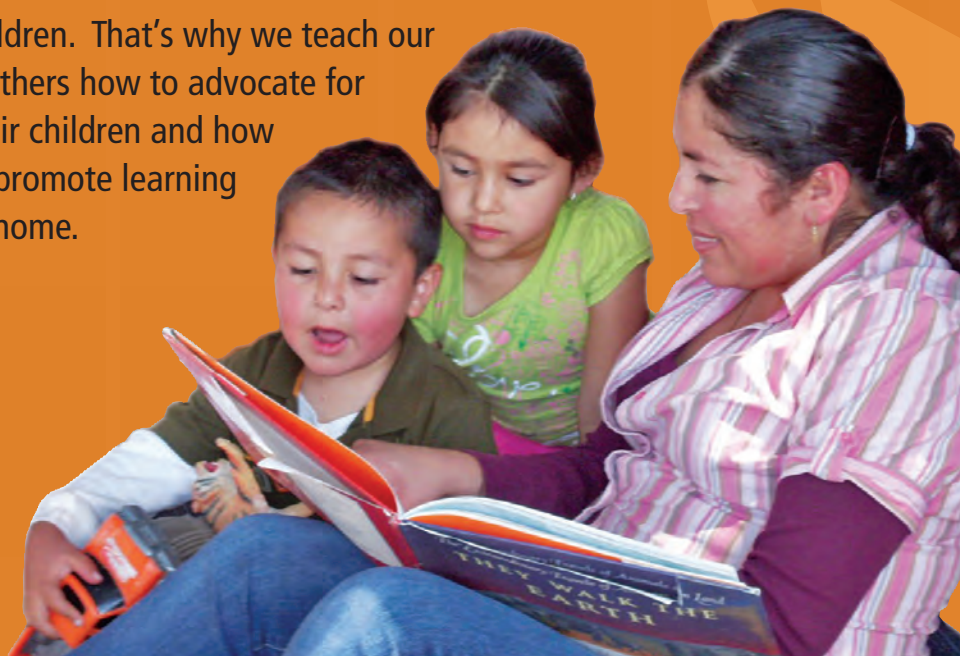

"There are many mothers like me who found a second opportunity to improve their education and become better parents and members of the community."

Children from low-income families are already far behind their peers by the time they reach kindergarten.

That's why we provide high-quality early childhood education that emphasizes literacy and prepares children to succeed in kindergarten and beyond. We also recognize that parents have the most influence on the future success of their children. That's why we teach our mothers how to advocate for their children and how to promote learning at home.

"I've learned that we must instill the desire to learn in our children so they can accomplish something good for our community."

Two Generation Learning

Each year, our two-generation learning program prepares over 100 low-income families to succeed in school and in life.

Research tells us that educating both parent and child during the earliest years is a powerful way to transform the future of an impoverished family.

That's why Mother's Club brings isolated mothers together for mutual support and education while their children thrive in the care of our early childhood educators.

For 50 years, Mothers' Club has educated both parents and children side by side.
